

REMEMBER THE TYPEWRITER? YOU WILL WANT ONE OF THESE

There are days, especially when our computer won't boot to give us access to Microsoft Word, that we long for the "good ol' days" when the manual or electric writing machine of the 50s or 60s nearly always worked. Granted, there was only one font (12 pt. pica or 10 pt. elite), depending on the typewriter model, but the dependability was always very high until you made a typo and had to use correction fluid (white out).

It is now possible (for a price) to have a mid-twentieth century typewriter that has the functionality of a 21st century computer! To see what's available and place your order, go to:
